

There is no need for people to chat incestly while traveling on board commercial aircraft. It would work if there was some way to sequestor those who wanted to use there cell-phone-- but there isn't, or if people, generally speaking, had some common courtesy when it comes to cell-phone usage-- but they don't (this has been proven time again in restaurants and other public areas), or if those who don't want to be annoyed by those chattering on endlessly on thier cell-phones had some recourse in the matter-- but we don't.

Nobody needs to talk on their cell-phone and few have the common courtesy and common sense to use them without infringing on the common peace.

Thank you,

Mark E. Barnhart